

Biography for Kim Atkins

Kim Atkins is the American Feed Industry Association’s manager of membership and engagement. She joined the association in May 2023. Atkins is responsible for prospecting, attaining, retaining and servicing AFIA member companies. She works with second-year AFIA Board of Directors to provide proactive leadership in the focus, design and implementation of the association’s membership program for all segments of membership; develops and continuously improves a system of involving members in the association; and retains members through recognition of the value they bring to the AFIA.

Prior to joining the AFIA, Atkins served as vice president and chief operating officer at the U.S. Grains Council. Atkins holds a bachelor’s degree in political science, with emphases in American politics and public law, and a minor in communications studies from the University of Montana. She can be reached at (703) 558-3566.

Founded in 1909, AFIA, based in Arlington, Va., is the world’s largest organization devoted exclusively to representing the business, legislative and regulatory interests of the U.S. animal food industry and its suppliers. The organization’s membership is comprised of more than 680 domestic and international companies that represent the total feed industry — manufacturers of commercial and integrated feed and pet food, ingredient suppliers, pharmaceutical companies, industry support and equipment manufacturers. AFIA members manufacture more than 75% of the feed and 70% of the non-grain ingredients used in the country. AFIA is also recognized as the leader on international industry developments and holds membership in the International Feed Industry Federation.
